Disposable surgery drapes

The most up-to-date materials are used for the disposable surgery drapes production, in several various designs depending on the surgery intervention severity and surgery staff requirements.

Two-ply drapes

Two-ply drapes are made of two-layer material, where one layer is an absorbent non-woven fabric and the second one is impermeable PE foil. High absorption ability, softness and also hang were achieved thanks to the materials used. These drapes also can be used as an effective barrier against the liquid leakage and penetration of undesirable microorganisms. The main advantage of these drapes thus is a perfect barrier and high absorbency of its entire surface, which contributes to the quality of the medical care in surgery rooms.

Three-ply drapes

This is a higher level product range with better usable features compared to two-ply drapes. This type of drapes keep the same features as two-ply drapes and the added non-woven fabric layer helps to increase patient comfort during the surgery procedure.

Zone drapes

During the development of zone drapes, the maximum accent was put on each components functionality to support the surgery team. Zones with higher absorbency (different features) were created within the drapes, depending on the load level during the surgery process to provide the ideal environment during the entire surgery intervention.

The drape base is made of a material with perfect hang and permeability. Even with these features it keeps high firmness and tightness.

The fundamental element of the zone drapes is highly absorbing zone that is in contact with various liquids during the entire surgery procedure time and comply with the most strict absorbency, tightness and firmness parameters to achieve maximum level of surgery area protection against the possible infection occurrence.

Most of zone drapes consist of several elements where the absolute integrity ensures the verified and standardized production processes. Among these elements can belong the cable and tubes organizers, bags and pockets for the liquid trap or clear areas with tightness retained.

Due to these items, zone drapes are able to provide extremely high level of safety and comfort for surgery staff and patient during the entire surgery process.

Fluid management bags and pouches

Are used for catching the fluids during the surgery intervention and they are also intended for tools and other things storing. Made of PE film, are supplied individually, in sets or integrated in the surgery drapes.
